Ideal Weather; Carnival Big Success

Grayling's tenth annual winter sports carnival is now a matter of history, leaving memories of three days of delightful pastime and entertainment. It surely was a great show and everyone seemed to enjoy it immensely. "Best time I ever had in my life" was a remark heard on several oc-

Our winter-time play park was in top condition and ready when the first vicitors began to ar rive. It was but a little while be fore the big triple toboggan slides and the attractive skating rinkwere alive with laughing people, all enjoying this most exhibarating of out-door pleasures. The north country and coperally Grayling's winter park is providing a recreational need for thousands of people who would like to play in winter as well as in summer The public now demand winter sports and it is Grayling's good fortune to be favored with an ideal layout for it.

The event took place beginning last Friday evening and continued to Sunday late in the night Every moment offered its at-tractions and it wasn't until the last toboggan was put away late Sunday night that the carnivai event was over.

We don't know of a better way to present the story of the carnival than to reprint the story published in the Bay City Daily Times in Monday's edition. Members of the staff of that excellent new paper were here from the first day to the last and each contion carried glowing accounts of the carnival and its features. Edgar Woods, state editor and editorial writer, wrote the story which says in part a follows.

Grayling today had returned to its routine existence as one of Michigan's most charming com-munities after basking in the sun of widespread and favorable attention during its tenth annual weekend a the winter sports capital of the middle west.

Enthusiastically regarded by it. prompters as the most successful winter carnival in the 10-year history of the event, the festival enjoyed the distinction of ideal weather throughout the three-day run. Zero and below-zero weather kept the toboggan slide fast, the skating and hockey rinks arm, and the ski tower and him adeas for the exhibition jumps that thrilled Saturday and Sunday throngs at the Winter Sports

Crowded despite elaborate plans to accommodate the heavy innu of visitors—estimated as 5,000—the park presented a picture of teeming activity throughout Su. day while winter sports fans for itement of participating or watching the carnival events. While thousands packed into the sports park, hundreds more jammed the city, alive with crowded activity, and presented a gay picture of carnival festivity. Visitors from all parts of Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and New York thronged to the city and Sports Park in a steady stream that began Saturday morning an: was uninterrupted until sun-down

Queen Cora is Charming Reigning over the carnival was pretty Miss Cora Lewis, queen of the 1935 festival, who was crowned in an impressive ceremony Saturday evening. Charming and graceful Queen Cora spent most of her day at the sports park agreeably posing innumerable times upon request of visitors who paid well deserved homage to the sports ruler. With her court of six grls, Queen Cora presided over the festivities during the afternoon from her throne of ice, a mag-nificent structure built of 4,200 regulation size blocks of ice. The artistic throne, weighing approximately 40 tons, was built by John Deckrow and Grant Thomp-son, two of Grayling's pioneer winter sports enthusiasts who annually convert the beautiful Johnson hill park into Michigan's greatest winter-time playground.

The ideal winter weather added incentive to those who sought their pleasure at the toboggan and from early morning until late evening, when the park

Located on the steep slope and at the foot of the highest hill in Crawford county, the broad expanse of the park provided a typical winter carnival vista both day and night—only at night the colored lights converted the playground into a spectacle of seeming unreality—a lone, brilliant star shining from the top of the ski tower dimly outlining the long sweep of the tower; two glossy skating rinks reflecting the light that was flooded upon them; the queen's throne sketched into a virtual fairyland picture, as the vari-colored lights, playing upon the ice from hidden crevices dimly outlined the giant creation; the three long toboggan slides flashing between evergreen arches intertwined with colored lights, and the soft reflection from the surrounding snow-covered hills.

Business places in Grayling were jammed for the weekend, Friday's and Saturday's crowd far outnumbering in early arrivals the throngs of previous years, but ample accommodations were provided for the festival guests. There was an unbroken parade of cars to and from the sports park, and everywhere was evident the festive carnival spirit that pleased the visitors and added still further to Grayling's long-herald-ed reputation as the first city of the state in hospitality.

To stage a winter carnival, such as we did costs a lot of hard work and a lot of money. In spite of our capable officers and executive committee who cut out every unnecessary cost. expenses piled up at an alarming rate. To give the public a fine program was uppermost in their minds and it was a grand show. Professional ski jumpers had to be provided, the ice throne had to be built, besides seeing to it that that triple toboggan slide skating and hockey rinks, bobsled trail ski jump and other features of the park were in fine condition. The provided and gowns and functions arranged, advertising prepared and circulated. It all meant hard systematic effort and a lot of expense. OUR "EXTRA" EDITION

Getting out an "Extra" edition of a new paper in a city the size of Grayling isn't so easy but we decided that the Winter Sports carnival was worthy of such an effort. Therefore it was so resolvd, and we did it. Many fine compliments have been received and we feel that our efforts have been well received and we feel quite rewarded. This meant copy writing, type to be set, special paper to be provided, cuts to be made, hard work and long hours. Ben Wright, publicity director of the East Michigan Tourist association was in town and when we made known our intentions he immediately vol-unteered to help. Later Edgar M. to help. Both men assisted in. securing mats for pictures and writing copy.

Be ides sending out papers to our regular subscribers 2000 extra copies were to be printed and circulated free. It was necessary co get enough advertising to covand at lunch time places were or the cost and our merchants. Were found by clever place cards. Mrs. and manufacturers responded cheerfully. In the short time cheerfully. In the short time available to get the advertising, pr several concerns were omitted unintentionally.

We had the work well started Friday afternoon when both Mr. Woods and Mr. Wright arrived busy. "I'm a printer too' said Mr. Woods and soon was busy making up (arranging the reading matter and cuts) the front page. He did a good job of it too, as is evident to those who saw it.
With Mr. Woods was Morris Greenstein, a teacher of history in the Bay City schools. He too a printer, assisted Mr. Wood. It was 2:30 Saturday morning before we decided that the work was far enough along to call it a day and all quit for the night. The next day more copy had to be written and we had plenty of excellent help. Ed. Drier, motion picture photographer too contributed interesting and appropriate

The final forms were on the press in time to pass into cir-culation by the time the 1:00 parade was on. Every auto in Grayling and at the park receiv-ed free copies of the edition, and on Sunday more copies were dis-tributed to the park. Copies also were mailed to most of the weekwere mailed to most of the weekly and many daily newspepers in Michigan, thus we feel that Grayling got invaluable publicity from

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Tonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Buil Duval, "king of the river," and town builty, in a log-birling contest Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER VI.—Eiliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the rail-road bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time ilmit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods. Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

old justice's face marked by an expression of concern and he came close before he spoke.

"I hear Red Bart Delaney's in town.

Ben nodded grimly. "Came to see me yesterday."

"Yeah. Took a long look at me

. over "Ben! Why, son!"

Elliott laughed mirthlessly and told what had happened in the Hoot Owl chopping the day before. "So he's gotten down to the hiring of a killer!" Able looked anxiously into Ben's face. "Son . . It can't go on. Timber or no timber; success or failure for the Hoot Owl, you've got to think of your-

"Benny, your way of doing things scares me! Why, this can't go on It mustn't! It's your own affair, for sure, when he tried to shoot you down, but maybe, perhaps, possibly, I'm going to beg you to be careful. So long as Delaney's in the country you've got to keep low. Get back to camp; stay there; let us pick some man I can trust to follow Bart and Brandon night and day so you'll not be caught!"

Ben shook his head resolutely. "I'll go on about my business as I should. I've never run vet and don't like to start any fast footwork now."

"But it's your life that's at stake, Ben! Don't be silly. That's what recklessness is: downright silly! That's not like you. Why, not tak ing precautions in this thing is like monkeying with a high tension

"No good, Able. I couldn't hold np my head if I hid out after the play I've made."

So Able was forced to give up after a time and shuffled up the street, drawing off his mitten again and rubbing his face briskly

He had only reached his office was unlocking the door when Aunt fin, walking grimly as if with a definite purpose, approached, "Good morping—" he began,

"Forget the palaver, Able Armthe woman said sharply, "You're in trouble. So are we all, maybe. That's why I came to see you. Is it true what they say that this Red Bart Delaney has showed up here in Tincup?"

"As true as disease or death or anything else unpleasant."

That's what I'd heard! Do I have to guess why he's come?" Able untied his scarf and shook his head sadly.

"No, Em. Your first guess will be right. And he took a shot at Benny yesterday!"

"And missed, I'd judge from the look of him just now. But if he's still here there'll be a next time; and he won't miss then. Did you do your duty and send the boy to some safe place?"

Able sighed and told her of his talk with Ben.

"So you couldn't make him listen to reason!" she muttered. "Well, if you can't, I can't. And us falling, there's only one other who would have a ghost of a show." "Dawn?"

She nodded. "Dawn could. But she won't. . . She won't go to him no. She wouldn't even listen to me talk about him, she's in such state. She's up to-her ears in love with Ben Elliott or I've got three legs! And then to have that scandalous woman do what she did

She sat down heavily in a chair and drew a great breath.

"I don't have to ask you or any other man about Ben Elliott, Able! I know the clean and decent folks when I see 'em. I'd bet my reputation as a Christian woman on that boy! That piece of play acting at the dance was some of Nick Brandon's work, you can bet your last red cent! Why, Able, that man's worse than ever I thought;

My, oh my!
"Well, what I'm gettin' at is this: The boy's in danger of bein' murdered every minute of day and night unless he takes your advice. There's no one left to try to talk him into being careful but Dawn. And how am I going to get her to see her duty when she goes into a cryin' fit every time his name's mentioned? Yes, sir. Every time she hears his name."

"She doesn't yet see that the affair was a put-up job, then?" She can't see anything. Able Armitage! Put yourself in her place. Suppose you were a young girl who's had the things to bear that she has all her life; and sup pose you fell in love for the first time; and suppose that young man was accused of such nastiness right in public with everybody listening and gawping? Would you stop to figure that the reason he seemed guilty was natural? That the thing was so far fetched from the truth and such a shock that he was all kerflummoxed? I should say you wouldn't! You'd do just what she's doin'; make yourself all sick with chills and fever by cryin'."

She twitched at the skirts of her cloak irritably and glared at the old justice as though he were a sworn enemy instead of a friend.

"What alls her is shock. She ain't got over the shock yet and every time his name or anything else about him is mentioned it sets her off again. She'll get over it. give her time. But then she'll be so humiliated to think she didn't use her reason that she won't be herself for another spell. And she should be herself now! There ain't any time to lose. She should patch up her misunderstanding with him right today-right this hour-and use her influence to persuade him to keep low. But how it's to be done I'd like to know. For Lord's sake, Able, ain't you got a single suggestion?" The justice had been stuffing light wood into his stove during this. Now he touched a match to the tinder opened the drafts and stood with his hands behind him, rusty overcost unbuttoned and drooping, deep in thought. "It's difficult to get anyone in her state to use reason. Maybe the in danger would be a counter irrithis other shock. Maybe If the affair of last week could be cleared up, if Dawn could he shown that this Lydia women was only carrying out a plan . .

But I wonder . . ."

Aunt Em stiffened in her chair. She looked hard at Able and her eyes parrowed a trifle.

"You see," he resumed, "if the giri-

"Hold on, Able Armitage!" she cut in, holding up a hand in warning. "Hold on, now! I've got to think . . . Got to think, I tell you! And I can't think while you carry on your gabble! after a moment , "I've got it, now! You stay right here, Able! You stay until I come back. If it works, it works. . . If it don't, it'll be time to talk some more!"

She moved resolutely to the door, left the office and strode down the street. On past the bank, the post office, the pool room. . . . On begood all the stores, on down to the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins the depot.

There, on the platform she stood a long interval staring across the tracks to that short row of houses on Section Thirty-Seven. The station agent came out of the office and looked at Em in surprise. "Hello!" he cried. "What brings von down here before-" "Homer," she cut in grimly, "in which one of them nasty places does this Lydia woman live?" "Why-why . . . Why, how should I know?" he evaded as a red flush crept up from his collar. "In the one at this end, I think. I'm not sure, of course. . . . I think she does, though. . . . She . . ."

But he no longer had a listenen Resolutely, slowly with like defiant majesty, the woman crossed the tracks, with never another word to her informant and never a look to right or left. Her head was up, her mouth set, and her long nose wrinkled as if at a disgusting odor. A woman up by the stores shaded her eyes and peered at the moving figure and stared and stopped. Aunt Em Coburn, headed for Thirty-Seven Why, it couldn't be!

But Aunt Em mounted the steps She rapped at length and vigorous ly on the scarred panel of the door. She went within, leaving a dozen long-distance watchers to wonder.

was long before she emerged . . Ah, then Tincup had and then a sight to see, a subject for spec ulation! For by Aunt Em's side her fur coat high about her face as if to hide the traces of tears which hasting applied powder could not eradicate,

Tears from those hard eyes Nothing less! For women know women and before Aunt Em had talked to this outcast five minutes in her shame, the clean spot left in her heart. And how Emma Coburn could talk! She talked that clear spot to a growing, glowing, glori ous thing. She talked Lydia out o her house, across the tracks: talked her into that slow, un ashamed, aimost flagrant march up the main street; talked her out of all but one look of misgiving at the windows of Nicholas Brandon's offices. . . . And around the corner and in beneath the bemlocks which whispered above the snug white house. They entered where Dawn McManus had hidden since the woman's words sent her flying from the dance hall to the sanctuary of Aunt Em's understanding arms.

All the way out to camp Dawr snuggled close again Able in his worn old buffalo coat. Now and again she trembled a bit once she cried softly a few minutes. But safe until you're certain that the much of the time she talked.

"What now?" Able asked gently. She looked at him through tears. "When a man loves a girl, that self? She can't bring a man's children into the world and have them whispered about as the grandchilonly cerupant of the place. "Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went pust the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . " It seemed as though Martin's voice falled after that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able. "What's wrong, Martin?" asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room, "Sick?" luto the room. "No . . . all right now," the other said, as if with great effort, "Ben? In the mill, I think" He picked up his pen, then, and ent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes His hands worked and his breath

"Dawn is here to see you." Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an in stant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. He gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, gloved hand and smiled wanly, protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? If I do the safe thing and workers will tumble to the fac that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down, you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes." "It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my
